How To Banish Dark Circles And Puffy Eyes for Good

These 15 expert-recommended products get rid of bags under eyes fast.

By Kristin Granero October 12, 2017

No one wants excess baggage—especially on her face. But actually finding out how to get rid of bags under your eyes can seem like a behemoth challenge. Thanks to long nights out, your period, allergies, or any number of common causes for puffy eyes and dark under-eye circles (even genetics!), it sometimes seems impossible to not look tired.

Regardless of whether you constantly battle to get rid of dark circles and bags or you have occasional bouts, the good news is that experts say you can get undereye swelling to go down. There are even ways to help strengthen the area to reduce future symptoms—all you need is a range of over-the-counter skincare products.

The best part about this list? No surgery or expensive procedures required. Dermatologists and makeup artists recommend their favorite, and sometimes pretty unexpected, picks for getting rid of bags underneath your eyes in a pinch and preventing them from returning the next morning.

Revision Teamine Concealer

"This is so much more than just a concealer. While most concealers merely cover up dark circles, Teamine works as a three-pronged medical skincare treatment, using chrysin, Brazilian ginseng, marapuama, and white lily extract to improve the appearance of dark circles; dihydroxy methylchromone (DHMC) and caprooyl tetrapeptide to help reduce to look of fine lines and wrinkles; and vitamin C, green tea extract, and troxerutin to brighten and soothe the skin." — Michelle Yagoda, M.D.

Dr. Brandt Skincare No More Baggage Eye De-Puffing Gel

"This is one of the few over-the-counter products that actually delivers results within minutes of application. Through a revolutionary biomimetic polymer technology, the gel acts as instant shapewear that tightens puffiness and reduces the appearance of crepey skin by forming an invisible film. The universal color correctives in the gel brighten dark circles that are commonly associated with puffy undereyes, and the active botanical extracts from green and white tea, caffeine, and birch bark will help to reduce undereye bags and fine lines longterm." —Shasa Hu, M.D.

"This cream is a great treatment, especially after a long night out. Its caffeine content helps to de-puff the under-eyes, while its combination of Vitamin C, licorice, and white birch help to brighten up the dark circles. I personally apply this before any primers or concealers, as it offers an opaque, luminescent sheen that instantly lightens you up." —Shereene Idriss, M.D., Union Square Laser Dermatology

"With age, sun exposure, and chronic rubbing, the skin around our eyes becomes weaker, leading to wrinkling, puffiness, and a crepe-y appearance. This cream contains retinol, the best-studied over-the-counter ingredient when it comes to stimulating collagen, which serves as the support for our skin. The stronger the skin foundation, the better its ability to minimize the appearance of undereye bags." —Joshua Zeichner, M.D., Zeichner Dermatology

"This eye cream contains caffeine, along with retinol, which reduces the appearance of fine lines and wrinkles and stimulates collagen and elastin production to strengthen and thicken the skin. An additional retinol booster enhances its efficacy. The caffeine in the cream acts a vasoconstrictor, reducing puffiness and tightening the skin. It's also an antioxidant, so it prevents collagen and elastin breakdown. This is a great product that can be used by any skin type. That said, those with sensitive skin may want to use it carefully due the potency of the retinol." — Sejal Shah, M.D., founder, SmarterSkin Dermatology

"These patches are my favorite for under-eye bags and fine lines—there's truly nothing like them. Once on, they don't dry up or drip all over the place. The gel stays cool and you can move them around to maximize the coverage area. I even flip them over and place them on the upper eyelid, too. They leave upper and lower lids looking refreshed." —Vincent Longo, creative director, stylebookings.com
